Lesson 3 What Is the Writing Process?

Good writing starts with a plan. Good writers take certain steps, which make up the writing process. Following these five steps leads to better writing.

Step 1: Prewrite

Think of this as the time to discover and plan. Writers might choose a topic, or they might list everything they know about a topic already chosen. They might write down what they need to learn about a topic. Writers might make lists that contain sentences, words, or even pictures. Some writers might make a chart or table and begin to put their ideas in order.

Step 2: Draft

Writers put their ideas on paper. This first draft should contain sentences and paragraphs. Good writers keep their prewriting ideas nearby. There will be mistakes in this draft, and that's okay.

Step 3: Revise

Writers change or fix their first draft. They move ideas around, put them in a different order, or add information. They make sure they used clear words that really show what they mean. This is also the time to take out ideas that are not on topic.

Step 4: Proofread

Writers usually write a neat, new copy. Then, they look again to make sure everything is correct. They look especially for capital letters, end marks, and words that are not spelled correctly.

Step 5: Publish

Finally, writers make a final copy that has no mistakes. They are now ready to share their writing. There are many ways for writers to publish their work.
